

Neha Bhatt
Art Instructor

Neha Bhatt is a teaching artist. She is a storyteller and uses puppetry arts to create fun educational programs for Fulton County Schools. She has a master's degree in special education and has worked in schools for several years before branching out as a Teaching Artist.

Her passion for textile art started in middle school while growing up in India. She learnt Indian Batik textile art, block printing and hand stitching as a part of her extra-curricular subjects. She later dived deeper to learn about textile art surface pattern designs by learning about different fibers and how to express creatively using different techniques of surface pattern designs. She enjoys offering workshops and paint parties using these surface pattern designs.

She brings her years of teaching experience and her passion for textile arts into her work. There are many creative ways to do fiber arts, and she enjoys sharing about them with young kids and grownups.